

Due to a change of plans, the Regis College Glee Club is making its way to Italy next semester.

Regis's own Glee Club has spent the last three years raising funds and spirits in anticipation of its Europe tour, which happens every two-to-three years. At first, they were heading to Greece, but the college deemed that option unsafe. In March of 2016, the club will instead spend spring break in Florence, Italy, for a week of sight-seeing and sight-reading. Glee-clubbers will soak in the culture of the city in the morning and spend the evening performing. They've been working on a mix of pop hits and classical works to bring on tour.

The trip costs nearly $3000 per person alone. The club officers have been throwing around ideas for events like bake sales and car washes to help make the tour affordable for all its members. For WRGS, this is Blessing Ajaero, signing off.
